NO NEED

Adin Ljuca

to balance one's accounts, friend, for every grain in the hourglass falls in its place anyhow. What used to hurt is now foreign: it had gone by like a movie on the screen while we, munching on pumpkin seeds, sat comfortably reclined in our dreams. But when the lights came back on after the show, a heavy feeling would remain: days empty like hulls, and jumbled together. We never needed anything beyond what we'd frittered away while holding on to our higher principles. Today there exists only what we've rejected; everything else we don't have.
