Brotherhood and Sisterhood

Mile Stojić

If I were to be born again and could choose, I would choose neither this language, nor this vocation

Neither this sign of faith, nor this faith without hope. I would not accept murderers teaching me justice.

I would not pick this time nor this country where there is no solace. Nor these brothers who have sold me. Nor this nation which sacrifices her sons to the golden calf. I would throw away my Name. Only would I choose You again, whom I touch a thousand times every day.

with a look of devotion and bliss.
